PREFACE.

STATISTICAL information is, at best, dry reading; but the writer hopes that the names and events chronicled in the following pages will serve to recall to graduates many pleasant memories of their college days and friends, and, in a measure, enable them, in fancy, to live that part of their life over again. These same names and events should also prove pleasant reading to the present and future undergraduates, and will, the writer trusts, serve as incentives to their college spirit, making them realize that their actions are but a part of Columbia's undergraduate life, and that future generations of college men will look to them for precedents.

The information herein presented had to be taken from so many uncertain sources, that the writer knows mistakes have appeared, but these he believes are confined to names. He takes this opportunity to urge all present and future recorders of Columbia achievements to make their work accurate and intelligible.

For the very kind assistance and encouragement given by many graduates and personal friends, the writer is truly grateful, and he assures them that their help has been no mean factor in the work of preparing these statistics.

Corrections and further information are most earnestly solicited; for, if the demand warrants the undertaking, a second edition will appear in a year or so.

WILLIAM S. SLOAN.

The first mention of any Literary Society at Columbia College is to be found in Holt's New York Journal of May 17, 1768, which states, in its account of the 11th Annual Commencement of Columbia College, that Benjamin Moore and Gouverneur Morris, of the graduating class, were awarded silver medals by the Literary Society for superior excellence in Oratory and Composition.

Then just previous to the Revolutionary War we know that Alexander Hamilton, class of 1777, was prominent in the Literary Society in existence at that time. There hangs at present in the Library a certificate of membership in the Columbia College Society for Progress in Letters of John B. Johnson, class of 1792. The President who signed the diploma was John P. Van Ness, class of 1789. In 1795 this Society became extinct.

After this the various classes had each their own Literary Associations. In 1801 the junior class formed one of these associations, under the name of PHILOMATHEAN. This was thrown open to all undergraduates in 1802, and the name changed to the PHILOLEXIAN LITERARY SOCIETY of Columbia College.

After the organization of PHILOLEX each succeeding freshman class had its Literary Association to prepare for the debates in the larger Society. In 1806 one of these Associations was thrown open to all the undergraduates under the name of the COLUMBIA PEITHOLOGIAN SOCIETY.

These two latter societies have continued in active existence from their foundation to the present time, with the exception of a few years when PEITHOLOGIA was without undergraduate members.

The features of these Societies have been their anniversaries, which were carried on very regularly; the most frequent entertainments being given by PHILOLEX. The last anniversary was held some six years ago, and the next year it was very sensibly discussed whether it would not be preferable to let Semi-Annual die out and retain the PHILOLEXIAN Anniversary. In addition to these anniversaries, the two societies had many joint meetings at which they were addressed by prominent graduates and others.

In 1878 some of the members of PHILOLEX, thinking that the state of that Society was too low, seceded and formed the BARNARD LITERARY ASSOCIATION.

PHILOLEX meets Thursday evenings, 8 o'clock, at 64 Madison avenue. PEITHOLOGIA meets Friday evenings, 8 o'clock, at 67 Madison avenue. BARNARD meets Friday afternoons, 2.30 o'clock, in the College Building.

Scientific Societies

Columbia College.

A marked difference is to be noticed between the Scientific and the Literary Societies, the former having heretofore been merely temporary organizations in contrast to the very regular existences of the latter. The first authentic record of a scientific society is found in the Columbiad or Columbian, No. 1, published in April, 1864. This was known as the Chemical Society. The establishment of the School of Mines shortly afterwards, apparently killed this, as Columbiad No. 2 merely repeats the list of officers given in No. 1, while in No. 3 no mention whatever is made of this association. The School of Mines Laboratory Association, which appeared in 1873, short-lived as it was, can boast of being the first Scientific Society in the School of Mines. In 1875 appeared a Scientific Society of the School of Mines which lived over two years. The year 1877 was the date of the Chemical Society of the School of Mines. April 5th, 1878, on the grave of this was formed the School of Mines Chemical Society. This flourished, and on October 28th, 1878, a sister association was organized under the name of the Engineering Society of the School of Mines. The present Chemical Society is the successor of the one just mentioned. It is to be hoped that the publishing of The Quarterly will do away with these constant reorganizations and make the present societies fixtures.

As no official records of the earlier societies are in existence, the membership lists have been compiled from contemporaneous college publications.

Columbia College.

These Societies have no regular continued existence, being Clubs which exist in yearly parts, as it were. Each succeeding class controls the organization for the time being, and while each Secretary keeps the list of members for his year no entire roll is in existence. The system of organization is about the same in each, a Chief Justice being annually elected by the members, or appointed by the President, and in turn two Assistant Justices are appointed by the Chief Justice for each case. Thus a member from time to time acts as Judge or Lawyer. The features of these Clubs are the Annual Joint Debates presided over by Prof. Theo. W. Dwight. The Clubs have varied in number from time to time, the principal being the Dwight, Columbia and Barnard.

Owing to the nature of these organizations a complete list of members would be of no value, besides being almost impossible to obtain. It will be enough to say that about one-fourth of each class enroll themselves, while a much smaller proportion engage in active participation.

Annual Register of Columbia College. 1848. Published by Stephen R. Weeks. This was the first ever issued, and was sold for ten cents a copy.

ANNUAL REGISTER OF COLUMBIA COLLEGE. From 1850–57, the Annual Registers were published by the senior class, and were sold for twenty-five cents a copy, with the exception of the last. Fifty cents was the charge for this. The Register of 1850–51 contained a sketch of the college building, and the one for 1851–52 was enlivened by the use of a colored border on each page. The class of '57 indulged in fancy borders of six different designs, employing as many colors in the printing. The committee in charge consisted of Samuel W. Francis, Elbridge T. Gerry, George G. Haven, Pierre McCarty, and James H. Slipper. The Trustees were so horrified by this piece of extravagance that, from that date, the Register has been published by the college authorities.

COLUMBIANA, A BAGATELLE BY THE STUDENTS OF COLUMBIA COLLEGE, 1850, 1855. An anonymous publication. The first issue appeared in 1850. The front page says that it is "Not by the Faculty." The second edition, in 1855, contained a few additions. The table of contents for the latter issue is The King and His Cabinet, a Remarkably Short Attic Comedy, by Th. Horatius Delpho. In Two Acts. (This is a witty burlesque on the inauguration of Charles King, LL.D.) Elegy in a College Yard, by a melancholy "senior." (The various professors are very well "shown up." Stephen Weeks comes in for his share.) Nevermore, (James Renwick, Professor of Natural and Experimental Philosophy and Chemistry, taking the part of "The Raven.") Extracts from Comet. (The Comet was evidently an anonymous publication that had previously appeared.)

CATALOGUES OF PHILOLEX. 1852, 1860. Published by the Society.

THE UNIVERSITY QUARTERLY. 1860–61, 1861–62. Conducted by an association of collegiate and professional students in the United States and Europe. Columbia editors: J. Howard Van Amringe, '60; E. Walter West, '61; W. F. Whitehouse, '60; and Charles Sigourney Knox, '62. E. H. Pomeroy, '60, delegate to association meeting at Worcester, Mass., July 25th, 1860. Association headquarters at New Haven. Each number from 150–200 pages. Basis of allotment, five or seven pages for each one hundred students; total number of pages in a year not to exceed number of subscribers at that college. Exclusive of news items, the following articles by Columbia gentlemen appeared in the order given: Academical Ethics, by Charles Murray Nairne, L.H.D.; Account of School of Law, by Theodore W. Dwight, LL.D.; Professional Study, by Abraham Suydam, '60; Columbia College, by E. Walter West, '61; Literary Societies of Columbia College, by Wm. M. Van Wagenen, '61; American Colleges, by Abraham Suydam, '61.

PHILOLEXIAN POEM. 1861. Delivered by Erastus B. Rudd, '61, at the 107th Semi-Annual, February 20th, 1861. Published by the Society.

CATALOGUE OF PEITHOLOGIA. 1861. Published by the Society.

"ARISE." 1862. Poem delivered December 19th, 1862, the 60th anniversary of Philolex, by Samuel Walden Cooke, '65. Published by the Society.

THE COLUMBIAN. April, 1864. Afterwards THE COLUMBIAD. No better explanation can be given than the following extract from the opening editorial: "The custom, which has been prevalent for many years in the principal colleges of our land, of publishing a college paper containing a list of the societies and fraternities connected with the college and such other matter as may prove of interest to the student, the class of '65 now proposes to inaugurate in our venerable institution." The first number was a sheet 18 x 12 in., and contained the Membership Lists of the Secret Societies on the first page. The two inside pages were occupied by a one-column editorial; a three-column class-poem, delivered at the Semi-Annual Exhibition, February 20th, 1865, by S. W. Cooke, '65; and two columns devoted to the Philolexian and Peithologian Literary Societies. The Faculty and Trustees were given in the first column of the last page, and the other two columns were taken up with the Alumni Association officers, the Chemical Society, the Y. M. C. A. of Columbia College, Class Officers, Base-Ball Associations, and a summary of the 58th Anniversary of the Columbian Peithologian Literary Society. The next class changed the name to THE COLUMBIAD, which it has retained. Its appearance has been annual ever since, and under the direction of the Junior Class, the various secret societies having been tacitly allowed representation on the Board of Editors. Feeling among the secret societies ran so high in 1868 that two COLUMBIADS appeared. The authorized edition was in book form, a style that succeeding classes have adopted. The various organizations have always supplied cuts to accompany their lists of members. THE COLUMBIAD of '77 contained a fine engraved portrait of President Barnard. That this COLUMBIAD was issued is due to F. Delano Weeks, of the class, who undertook all financial responsibility at a time when the publication was threatened by "class politics." THE COLUMBIAD of '80 was marked by being the first that really contained illustrations. The same number introduced "Grinds" on classmates. Both these features have been retained. THE CAP AND GOWN. 1868. Prospectus issued on April 27, 1868. Introductory number had the date of June, 1868. First volume commenced October, 1868. "All politics, college as well as national," were excluded from the opening numbers. The terms were $2.50 per annum, 10 numbers, afterwards reduced to $2.00. Each number consisted of at least eight pages, size, 9½ x 12 in. In November, 1873, representatives from the School of Mines were admitted to the posts of editors, and the name changed from THE CAP AND GOWN to ACTA COLUMBIANA to satisfy the following condition: "That the name of the paper be changed, so that it shall not be a name which shall belong peculiarly to the Academical School or to the School of Mines." The number of pages was raised to twelve and the size diminished to 7 x 11 in. A tinted cover was put on, October, 1875, the name running diagonally across the same, and the paper was made the present size, 8 x 10½ in., and the pages varied in number from sixteen to twenty-four as the occasion demanded. In October, 1876, the paper assumed the present appearance. The appearance of a rival journal, in July, 1877, compelled the editors to make the paper a tri-weekly, i.e., twelve numbers per annum. The subscription price was reduced to $1.50. The next year the price was restored to $2.00, and the volume increased by six numbers, making a total of eighteen.

The Boards of Editors are appended, the first board being also the founders.

FACTA COLUMBINARIA. A journal devoted to Expurgations. No. 1, January 19th, 1874; No 2, April 15th, 1874; No. 3, December, 1876. An anonymous publication intended as a comic paper which should ape the Acta Columbiana. The first number consisted of but four pages and opened with a poem some three columns in length, entitled "The Foot-Ball Tournament," descriptive of a foot-ball match with Rutgers. It was written in heroic style, and was a very clever burlesque on a poem entitled "The River Tournament," by Pierre Pascal Harrower, '74, which appeared in the final number of the Cap and Gown. The rest of the reading matter was made up mostly of personal grinds, many of which were very good. The paper was sold at "Fritz's," and a large number of copies were disposed of. Its appearance created much talk in college, and its contents were considered very clever. No. 2 was not considered as much a success as No. 1, but was excellent. It contained several very good valentines addressed to the professors; "Mine Host's Lager (very far from the German of Uhland)," a parody on Prof. Short's translation of "Mine Host's Daughter," that had appeared in the Acta Columbiana; a "Lecture on Light," "Situations Wanted," and a few additional grinds. The secret of the editorship has been kept very well, but it was generally attributed to a few members of the class of '74. No. 3 was a scurrilous and libellous sheet that the editors of the two former numbers denounced in a letter to the Acta Columbiana signed by several initials. This number bore the announcement that it was published by "request of the Faculty." The best written article it contained was an examination of the Faculty by a committee of the students. No other numbers have ever appeared.

SONGS OF COLUMBIA, May 1876. During the college year 1875–76 the Acta agitated the subject of a Columbia Song Book, and finally announced that the editors had undertaken the task of producing a book which would shortly be issued. In May, 1876, the SONGS OF COLUMBIA appeared, and was a most creditable publication, typographically as well as otherwise. It was handsomely bound in blue cloth with silver stamping, and contained all of the familiar Columbia airs, with several new songs. By the end of the next college year the entire edition was disposed of. The book was published by the Board of Editors of Acta Columbiana, and was edited by John B. Pine, '77, then Managing Editor of the Acta.

THE COLUMBIA SPECTATOR. 1877. In the spring of 1877 it had become apparent to some of the students (several editors of the ACTA among the number) that a second college paper could be started and made to pay at Columbia. The idea was that the ACTA COLUMBIANA should continue as a monthly journal, while the new paper, which was to be issued twice as often, would become a "news" paper. Accordingly, an organization of the parties interested was effected on April 24, 1877; and in the early part of June the first number appeared of THE COLUMBIA SPECTATOR. In size it was copied from the ACTA; but it differed from the latter in having no cover. The subscription price was fixed at two dollars per annum—eighteen numbers—and this rate has been retained ever since. In the number bearing date February 15, 1879, a new feature was inaugurated in Columbia journalism—namely, the insertion of a full-page cartoon in every issue. In spite of prophesies to the contrary, these cartoons appeared regularly and met with so much approval that, in the autumn of 1880, the plan of scattering smaller illustrations throughout the paper was adopted, and every number now contains several society illustrations with an occasional cartoon. A list of the various Boards of Editors is subjoined:

THE MINER. The Class of Seventy-Nine, School of Mines, in its junior year decided that there were enough reasons to warrant the publication of a year book similar to the COLUMBIAD, which would represent more fully the Scientific Department. So in the Spring of 1878 the MINER No. 1 appeared. It contained lists of the members of all the Societies and Organizations connected with the School of Mines, records of the Athletic achievements of the University and grinds on members of the editing (junior) class.

POCKET SONG BOOK for the use of the Students and Graduates of Columbia College. December 4th, 1878. The prefatory note said that "A cheap, compact edition of the most popular songs of our Alma Mater has been desired for some time by Columbia's undergraduates. This little book is offered merely as an attempt on the part of the Columbia Spectator Association to supply this desire." The book contained the words of eighteen songs with the first bar of the air. Edited by William S. Sloan, then Treasurer of The Spectator. Published by the Columbia Spectator Association.

CATALOGUE OF PEITHOLOGIA. April 16th, 1879. Published by the Society.

SONGS OF EIGHTY-ONE. March, 1879. A collection of favorite college airs for the use of the Class of '81, compiled according to resolution passed by the class of '81, on November 8th, 1878. Edited and published by J. O. Crane, Chairman; Harry T. Peck, W. Forster, T. G. Patten.

THE PHONOGRAPH. Thursday, April 24th, 1879, notices appeared on the college grounds of a new weekly paper entitled The Week, which was announced to appear on Tuesday, April 29th. The students on Monday, April 28th, discovered announcements of a paper to be issued "semi-spasmodically," entitled THE PHONOGRAPH, and were further informed that the first number would be ready at one o'clock. Both of these announcements were anonymous. THE PHONOGRAPH apparently had no raison d'être and was a little four-page paper containing college news and a few personalities, such as might have been published in any paper. A second number, a little more personal, appeared May 5th, with a supplement of two pages. The contents of No. 2 were of more interest, containing as they did the list of entries for the Fourth Field Meeting of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association, a description of the Fourteenth Field Meeting of the C. C. A. A., and amusing "Ink Photographs" of the Junior crew. The notices of the second number announced that the former publishers had sold out to a "newer and fresher board." No other numbers appeared. Later developments proved that the first publication was caused by a feeling of rivalry against parties erroneously supposed to be the publishers of The Week.

THE WEEK. On April 29th, 1879, a four-page paper edited by the famous "Richard Roe and John Doe," appeared on the college grounds with the promise of appearing weekly, provided sufficient cash inducements were offered. Apparently these were not satisfactory, as but one number appeared. The title assumed was THE WEEK, and the editors adopted the pronoun "I" in their editorials, after the style of Labou-chère in the London Truth. The paper was very newsy and contained none of the objectionable personalities current in anonymous college publications. The best piece in the paper was a very good parody entitled "Eldredge's Advice to the Rowers—with apologies to the shades of Wm. S."

THE SCHOOL OF MINES QUARTERLY. THE QUARTERLY was established by the joint action of the Engineering and Chemical Societies of the School of Mines in the spring of 1879, just previous to the close of the term. A board of editors was elected, consisting of two from each of the societies and representing the two upper classes. The first number of the magazine appeared in November following, and the subsequent numbers of the volume in January, March and May. The reading matter is made up of papers read before the societies, and of notes on current scientific topics. In March, 1881, the organization was changed by admitting the Association of the Alumni to an interest in the publication. By the new arrangement the Board of Editors consists of three men from the Engineering courses, three from the Chemical course and three from the Alumni Association.

CLASS HISTORIES. Three of the graduating classes have published Histories after leaving college, and, while these cannot be called "Undergraduate Publications," yet it is but right to mention them. Samuel A. Blatchford, '67, one of the founders of the Cap and Gown, published the first, and it is really a remarkable compilation of statistics as well as being an interesting narrative of facts. The next issued was by Clarence R. Conger, '71, who was very prominent in the management of the Cap and Gown while an undergraduate. This History is especially interesting as the members of the Class of '71 were very active, individually as well as collectively, during their college course. The famous "Court Martial," presided over by Prof. William G. Peck, is given due prominence. Considerable of the "official correspondence" addressed from time to time to individual members of the class is also published. Sylvanus Albert Reed, '74, was the next author. This is not as statistical as the two volumes previously issued, and is a well written compilation of Seventy-four's deeds while its members attended or were supposed to attend the undergraduate curriculum.

Recipients of the Goodwood Cup.

In 1864 the graduating class decided to present a testimonial to its most popular member, the idea undoubtedly being suggested by the prize of the Alumni Association, awarded by the joint action of the faculty and class to the "most faithful and deserving student of the graduating class." As it was about the time of the Goodwood races in England, the peculiar force of the term "Goodwood" sufficiently impressed the class so as to lead them to give their testimonial—a handsomely carved wooden cup, with a gold plate suitably engraved—the title of the Goodwood Cup. The fortunate recipient was Joseph Bayley Lawrence. The following year the graduating class, for what they considered good and sufficient reasons, changed the form and name of the testimonial, and called it the Wooden Spoon. That same year the class of '66, then in its junior year, despite the angry opposition of the senior class, decided to forestall the senior presentation by presenting a similar testimonial to one of its own members, and followed the example set by the class of '64 in form and name. So in 1865 both the Wooden Spoon and Goodwood Cup were presented. Very naturally the next year the class of '66 did away with the senior presentation and left the custom to the junior class. While the numbers were small it was not so difficult to agree upon some really popular man; but class politics soon interfered with a genuine vote of popularity so that the Cup became a mere matter of which faction was the stronger. Seventy-eight was almost torn asunder by a very bitter contest. Seventy-nine, deciding that no one man was really pre-eminent in popularity, abolished the presentation; Eighty, after a somewhat prolonged struggle, followed Seventy-nine's example; Eighty-one, by coupling certain conditions with the method of election, effected the same result; and Eighty-two unanimously decided not to present the Cup.

The presentation was of a social nature, giving the students an opportunity to show the college grounds upon peculiarly favorable circumstances.

The ceremonies were usually a presentation speech with a reply, followed by dancing, the time chosen being in the evening and the place, the college campus. A list of the recipients are subjoined, the year referring to the class.

CLASS DAY.

In 1858 the Alumni Association established a prize of fifty dollars to be awarded to the "most faithful and deserving student of the graduating class." The method of selection required the faculty to select three names and to submit them to the class, who from these three designate one to receive the prize. This designation required a meeting of the class, and it was from that occasion that formal class organizations commenced, and gradually became general. The class of '68 was the first to organize in freshman year. The Class of '64 in addition, as is elsewhere narrated, presented a Goodwood Cup to its most popular member. This presentation was made at a dinner given by the recipient of the Cup to his class-mates. The Class of '65 decided to have exercises of a public nature before graduation, and thus started CLASS DAY. The ceremonies were substantially the same each year, and usually included Music, an Oration, a Class Poem, the reading of the Class History, Smoking the Class Pipe, fastening a memorial plate on one of the trees, planting an ivy, and "saluting the rooms," i.e., visiting each lecture room to sing a farewell song. The class of '78 was the last to observe this pleasant custom, though several have since made attempts to revive it. The officers of the various class days are added. The omission of some of the officers is due to their absence from the exercises.

Burial of the Ancient.

The Class of '66, at the close of their sophomore year, desiring to show in an emphatic way their delight in leaving behind them the study of Ancient Geography, then a part of the sophomore Curriculum, resolved to publicly bury their detested foe. The services were simple, yet very pathetic, consisting of a funeral procession up Fifth avenue to the College green, where an oration and elegy were delivered, followed by an adjournment to a neighboring beer saloon, where friends of the rejoicing sophomores were convivially entertained. Succeeding classes deemed the precedent an excellent one, and have more or less enlarged on the original idea. Sixty-seven had the honor of really burying Ancient Geography, but deliverance from Bojesen's Grecian Antiquities has proved an equal source of joy. Two of the classes, namely, '69 and '70, were sufficiently wealthy to purchase an ancient urn for the ashes of their foe. Seventy-one and Seventy-three decided not to have a Burial. Seventy-four varied from former classes by having a "Burial of Animosities" between themselves and the freshman ('75) class. In place of the customary περιδεῖπνον, or beer-drinking, the two classes headed by a strolling German Band marched to Delmonico's for a "love feast." Seventy-five, however, returned to the old custom. Eighty-one most effectually buried Bojesen, being the last class tormented by that study. Eighty-two was, therefore, compelled to choose a new study and buried an Anglo-Saxon reader. Eighty-three held a Roman Triumph over their conquered foe, "Legendre." In the following lists the dates refer to the class and not to the year.

MUSICAL.

Unfortunately Glee Clubs have never proved successful at Columbia. This is not owing to a want of good voices but to the utter lack of practice, the indispensable requisite for good chorus singing. The earlier organizations were principally quartettes of personal friends. The large memberships of the Glee Club under its varied organizations are apt to be misleading, and it must be borne in mind that but a small percentage possessed good voices and that a very much smaller number were entitled to be called active members.

BASE-BALL.

Unfortunately no records can be obtained previous to April, 1864, the date of the first Columbiad, and even from that date statistics are few and far between. The names of numerous class nines are given and the scores of a few games, but Base Ball never flourished at Columbia, and the facts given below are merely to show how little active work was ever accomplished.

FOOT-BALL.

Foot-ball has always been indulged in to a greater or less degree by the undergraduates of Columbia. As far back as 1824 it was the custom, before and after recitations, to kick a foot-ball around the college green, and then, as now, the freshman class always furnished the necessary foot-balls. Intercollegiate games are of recent date, a variety of reasons preventing them, their expense being not the smallest factor. In the autumn of 1876 Columbia joined the Intercollegiate Foot-Ball Association, thereby adopting the rules of the Rugby Union. The record given below commences in November, 1870, though it is probable that there were matches previously played. Apparently there were no games during the college year 1871–72.

Athletics.

COLUMBIA COLLEGE

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

In the Cap and Gown of January 20th, 1869, there appears an interesting letter from Cambridge University, England, written by George L. Rives, '68, in which he advocates the formation of an athletic association at Columbia. A previous issue of the Cap and Gown contains a call for a meeting to organize such an association—David B. Ogden, '69, having agreed to preside. The result of these efforts was the formation of the Athletic Association of Columbia College, on March 10th, 1869. To encourage athletic sports the Trustees generously made an annual appropriation of Two Hundred Dollars. The first field meeting was held Wednesday, June 2d, 1869, on the Capitoline Grounds, Brooklyn; no records being kept, however, of times, distances, or heights. On May 15th, 1874, aquatic sports were held under the auspices of the Association. In the autumn of 1878 it was decided to make the fall sports consist mainly of handicap events, a decision followed by succeeding officers. In the spring of 1881 class games were given, open to members of the sophomore and freshman classes.

The following extract from a number of the English sporting paper Land and Water, published in the Winter of 1871, is of sufficient interest to warrant its reprint here:

"Columbia College has taken the lead of American colleges in the introduction of athletic sports, in imitation of the English universities. An Athletic Association has been organized and is now in successful operation * * * * The Association has received every encouragement and pecuniary aid from the Faculty and Trustees of the College, and bids fair to become a permanent institution."

Boating.

It was not until 1873 that Columbia could really boast of a genuine Columbia College Boat Club. Previous to 1860 a Boat Club existed, but a writer in the University Quarterly that year (1860) states that the main object of the club was to obtain initiation fees and dues from freshmen. The interest in boating was subject to fits and starts, and boat houses were rented occasionally for the use of clubs. The boating enthusiasm, that extended so widely among the colleges in 1873, reached Columbia, and a crew was sent to Springfield that year. While they did not win, a very creditable record was made. The next year at Saratoga the Columbia crew were victorious. This so stirred up the students that with the very substantial aid from the Trustees a Boat House was erected at a cost of ten thousand dollars and completed in April, 1876. Of this ten thousand dollars the Trustees gave six thousand, and made for its maintenance an annual appropriation of twelve hundred and fifty dollars, accompanying their gifts with the condition that the Boat House and the expenditure of the appropriation should be under their direction. The varied successes and defeats are given below; but it is to the credit of the College that Columbia crews have never been disqualified nor ever won a race on a foul. In addition to the boating record and list of boat club officers is given the summaries of the various boat club regattas. The first College regatta was given, however, under the auspices of the Athletic Association on May 15th, 1874.

CRICKET.

In the spring of 1878 a cricket eleven was organized in Columbia by several devotees of the game. Owing to the lack of interest taken in base-ball, cricket received the support of the base-ball players. Quite a number of matches have been played, with more or less success. As in other games, the element of practice, which is so very important, is comparatively ignored, and there is not the slightest doubt but that a majority of the defeats sustained would have been avoided had the players indulged in some preparatory practice, and provided they had avoided being absent from matches. The latter habit has caused most of the games to be played with short elevens. The performances, taking these facts into consideration, have been very successful. This year an Intercollegiate Cricket Association has been formed, and annual games will be played for a silver tankard emblematic of the Intercollegiate Championship.
